• OLT (Optical Line Terminal)
• Central hub for EPON networks, connecting the core network to passive optical distribution.

• Best for ISP headends, central offices, and large-scale fiber deployments.

• Common models include 10G OLTs and GEPON OLTs with multiple ports for high-capacity networks .

• ONU/ONT (Optical Network Unit / Terminal)

• Essential for neighborhood-level FTTH rollouts and cost-effective deployments .

• OAM&P Software
• Provides centralized monitoring and management of the EPON network.

• Popular among network operations centers and managed service providers .

Price Quotes and Sourcing
• Wholesale Pricing: EPON equipment is available at factory or wholesale prices, often significantly lower than retail. Prices depend on model, port capacity, and order volume .

• Example: A hot-selling 1GE/1FE ONU or ONT can be sourced from Guangdong-based suppliers with FOB delivery terms, targeting markets in South Asia, South America, and Europe .

• Customization: Many suppliers offer OEM/ODM services, allowing buyers to customize EPON devices to specific network requirements .

• Supplier Selection Tips: Compare multiple distributors for competitive pricing, factory reliability, and delivery consistency. Pre-production samples are often provided to ensure quality before mass orders .
Commercial Advantages
• EPON networks provide gigabit-level speeds over shared fiber, supporting streaming, cloud access, and real-time data transfer.

• Cost-effective deployment: One fiber can serve multiple users via passive splitters, reducing material and labor costs.

• Scalability: Easily expandable for residential, business, or enterprise networks.

• Reliability: Low latency and consistent performance enhance user experience and customer retention . For accurate price quotes, it is recommended to contact multiple verified suppliers on platforms like Alibaba or Made-in-China, specifying the desired model, quantity, and delivery terms to receive competitive offers .
